Hiring the Best
Qualified and Most Talented Employees

As companies expand their global operations, and as competition within and across jurisdictions increases, companies want to upgrade their workforce and hire the “very best” and “most talented” employees in each country where they have operations. Successful recruiting, interviewing and screening of candidates – from the lowest to the highest level within the organization – will reduce turnover and other costs in the long run and increase profitability.

As companies expand their global operations, in-house and outside counsel and H.R. representatives are more regularly being asked to provide advice on the following issues:

- What, if any, policies and procedures can a company adopt on a global basis to hire the best employees?
- What, if any, information can be requested of a candidate on an employment application?
- What, if any, questions can be asked of a candidate in an interview?
- What, if any, information needs to be shared with the candidate about the company or about the job?
- What, if any, pre-employment medical tests or exams or other tests can be required of a candidate?

This handbook will provide both legal and practical answers to these questions and discuss the delicate balance between maintaining the privacy rights of employees with the business interests of employers.
Compiled under the auspices of the International Bar Association, this first ever comparative study of a crucial issue in corporate law gives practitioners a unique tool for comparing competing legislative systems in our globalizing economies. Each of more than fifty authors, all of them senior lawyers in major firms, provides a summary on his or her home law on directors’ liability, as concise and as easy to understand as possible.

The contributions describe the relevant law in force in each particular jurisdiction, along with an insightful discussion of trends and future prospects. For each of thirty-four different jurisdictions the authors detail and explain such factors as the following:

- national legal theories of directors’ liabilities
- recent cases dealing with directors’ liability
- ‘socio-anthropological issues’
- corporate governance
- liability issues
- indemnification; and
- insurance.

Where applicable, coverage also includes the legal implications of jurisdictional variations in such matters as judicial review, lawyer directorship, directors’ reliance on outside professionals, and the effect of the European Action Plan. Jurisdictions in all continents are covered, including all G8 states, the European Community, and sixteen EU Member States. An alphabetical subject index at the end of the book offers not only page numbers but, in addition, abbreviated country names, in order to facilitate finding the appropriate page numbers for the country desired.

This one-of-a-kind publication will be of enormous value to legal practitioners, whether in private practice or in the legal departments of one of the globally active companies, as a comprehensive and easy-to-understand first access to the law of foreign jurisdictions on directors’ liability.
The idea for this book came about following the International Bar Association’s annual conference that was held in Prague in September of 2005. One of the sessions at this conference co-chaired by Pascale Lagesse and Mariann Norbom was entitled "Restrictive covenants in employment contracts and other mechanisms for protection of corporate confidential information."

International panelists consisted of members of the legal profession, corporate representatives and a court justice. Discussions focused on key issues and the concerns companies have when seeking to protect their confidential information, and insight was given into what employers can do in order to ensure that their employees do not take valuable company information with them upon leaving the company.

Using a case study as a basis, particular emphasis was placed on non-solicitation and non-compete covenants, and the extent to which an employer can rely on such covenants when protecting his interests. The specific situation of a key employee who left her employer to join a competitor was addressed, and the types of action the employer could take in order to avoid the solicitation of his clients and staff and prevent his employees from competing against him were discussed.

This book picks up where the session left off, and consists of no less than 13 contributions from individuals from 5 continents. Each country representative has been asked to respond to a series of pertinent questions on the subjects of restrictive covenants and protection of confidential information, in order to give a comparative overview of how these issues are treated in different jurisdictions. This comprehensive publication will be a valuable resource tool for legal practitioners, employers, HR professionals and anyone interested in the field of employment law.
